stones collection

Stones are playful, decorative and functional singular shelves. Imagine vertical steppingstones that hold your store's products as a display or simply to decorate with a potted plant or a lamp. A great item to spice up the walls of any shop - or any interior for that matter. Funnily enough, each 'stone' is made of solid wood and covered with either fabric for a soft look and feel or finished in stained wood.

formosa collection

jacob nitz

New horizons, new ideas. A trip to Taiwan inspired designer Jacob Nitz to create the Formosa collection. "Formosa was once the name of Taiwan given by the Portuguese - meaning 'beautiful island'", explains Nitz. Each stool forms a small island surrounding a larger one, namely the table: Formosa Archipelago.

Stools and tables are available in different sizes, heights and finishes. The Formosa is a sturdy and durable collection making it ideal for school canteens and lunchrooms. Tops available as solid oak, walnut or a powder-coat finish.

blossom collection

Mario Alessiani

Blossom absorbs sound waves and – if so desired – emits light. Light and sound, form and function. Designer Mario Alessiani says he was inspired by the shape of the tulip flower and we can see what he means. As a lamp Blossom resembles a tulip in full bloom, as an acoustic wall panel it is a deconstructed flower. It comes in three sizes and is produced with high quality sound-absorbing foam and fabrics. The wall panels are available in five different sizes.

White boards are also available in this collection; a Blossom white board makes a great design alternative for the traditional clunky boards. Although the Blossom white board does not offer acoustic benefits, they can of course be combined with acoustic panels. Mix and match!
